HISTORICAL NOTE

The "Marine Society at Salem in New England" was founded in 1766 and can properly claim to be the oldest organization now existing in the city except some of the churches. At the close of the French War Salem commerce was rapidly expanding and the shipmasters felt that they should have a society for mutual aid and to look after the interest of navigators. Eighteen of them met and formed this organization. It rapidly grew proving its usefulness and in 1771 they petitioned Governor Hutchinson and the Provincial Legislature for a charter which was granted in 1772 and under which they still act. The purposes of the Society have always been the care of aged members and their families who were in destitute circumstances and aiding navigation and looking after the marine interest of the port. During their long history five hundred and ninety-one shipmasters and shipowners have been members of the Society including most of the distinguished names in the long chapter of Salem commerce. There are still upon the roll three who were masters or supercargoes in distant seas. The number available for membership had so declined that in 1919 certain changes were made with the consent of the legislature by which descendants of original members became eligible for membership. At different times the Society has maintained a school of navigation, had to do with the erection of lighthouses in the harbor and called the attention of the proper authorities to its needs, but its principal work has always been charitable. It holds very considerable funds, gifts of past members, and from the income makes grants to aged masters and their widows and children. The Society from time to time holds meetings at which papers relating to shipping and the history of Salem commerce are read. Their headquarters is an attractive room fitted up as a ship's cabin and filled with interesting memorials including the great volume of pictures of the Salem shipmasters from the beginning of the Society.
